

Hutchinson, KS - May 5, 2004

iip❖group, an emerging leader in ambulatory healthcare information technology, today announced a strategic partnership with D-Link Corporation. This new partnership allows iip❖group access to the entire line of D-Link products, including wireless and ethernet local area network equipment.

D-Link is the global leader in Revenue and market share for Wireless and Ethernet networking for both consumer and SOHO users. Founded in 1986, D-Link is dedicated to making networking easy and affordable for its customers, offering innovative, award-winning products that seamlessly integrate with a variety of devices and applications.

This new relationship between iip❖group and D-Link will allow us to provide the highest quality network equipment tailored to each medical practice's demands. Furthermore, our consultants will have knowledge of future roadmaps and plans for new technologies through D-Link's ongoing educational offerings. With the rapid changes in healthcare technology products, having access to the latest information on both shipping on planned products is essential.

In sharp contrast to most other industries that have computerized their core business functions very aggressively, healthcare has lagged behind. While some physicians' offices have introduced computerized scheduling and billing, virtually none have made even tentative steps towards computerizing their clinical information. The iip❖group's vision points to healthcare information solutions supported by the highest quality service.
